

WORKSHOPS

Our workshops are our most popular service. We understand the complexity of sustainable development - it is a long process that should be designed on the basis of your company values and set-up. Our workshops have been a popular tool providing necessary knowledge to employees at eye level and it is often used as a kick-start and inspiration to drive new sustainable initiatives.

Closed Loop offers high-quality, hands-on learning within a wide range of topics concerning the fashion industry's challenges from a life cycle perspective. We focus on materials from a raw material starting point, going through the entire value chain up to end-of-use and recycling, thereby providing our workshop participants with a way of thinking that incorporates sustainability into their existing practices. We also address the environmental hotspots in the industry: Extensive water use and water pollution, massive GHG emission from energy use among other things, substantial use of chemicals, a significant waste problem, biodiversity impacts, contamination and exhaustion of land.

On average only 5% of the resources that are used to produce a product are contained in the product itself. The resources available are not unlimited and we must therefore use them responsibly by going from take, make, dispose way of thinking, to a reduce, reuse and recycle behavior.

We use a hands-on approach and as inspiration we include examples of profitable business models. We always work in close collaboration with you and your needs, which means that our workshop is always tailored to your company and your practices - no two workshops are the same.
